

'the album that plays like a playlist'

- The Frank Horvat Band ushers in new era for the art of album making

The Frank Horvat Band contemplates the existence of a Strange Machine, album out November 1, 2014

THE FRANK HORVAT BAND – Formed in 2013 by Canadian composer/pianist Frank Horvat, The Frank Horvat Band's uncreative name hides a wildly creative sound and a revolving roster of ultra talented musicians. An indie art rock band with an electronic edge, they combine textured ambient songs with more rocking and retro tunes.

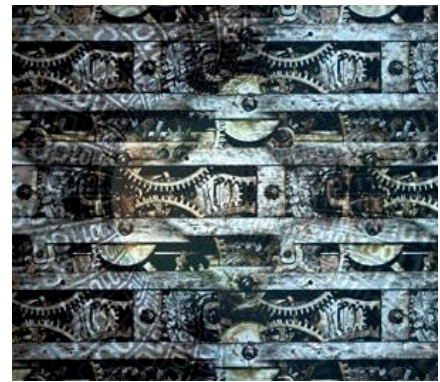

Keywords: indie art rock, hypnotic, rhythmic, soaring, introspective, contemporary, quirky melancholy, ambient, pained, electronic, driving Broken Social Scene, PJ Harvey, David Bowie

THE 'STRANGE MACHINE' STORY – Not wanting to create a concept album that nobody would ever take the time to hear in its entirety, Frank Horvat designed TFHB's latest album like a playlist. The album flows together through the concept of the machines that control us, both external and internal. However, the songs change feel, vocalists and instrumentalists throughout giving it the feel of a handpicked playlist.

Band members include: Ghislain Aucoin (vocals), Kismet Cooper (vocals), Michael Davidson (vibes), Christine Duncan (vocals), Oleksandra Fedyshyn (violin), Thom Gill (vocals, guitar), Bram Gielen (bass), Justin Haynes (guitar), Frank Horvat (keys, songwriter), Jean Martin (percussion), Erika Nielsen (cello), Joseph Phillips (bass), Evan Tighe (percussion), Felicity Williams (vocals)

fishworshipper – sweet, soaring
Human Cyborg – melancholic, catchy, retro
Ultimate Killing Machine – part R&B, part dance, all social commentary

Reviews

"The voice of Felicity Williams takes you off this earth. Red Bull should be the band's sponsor."
- Laurie Brown, CBC Radio's The Signal
